

The Tragidie

Then tell me what doth he vpon the sea?

Dar. vnlesse for that my Leige I cannot guesse.

King. Vnlesse for that he comes to be your Liege,
You cannot guesse wherefore the Welchmen comes,
Thou wilt revolt and flie to him I feare.

Dar. No mighty Liege, therefore mistrust me not.

King. Where is thy power now to beat him backe?
Where are thy tenants and thy followers?
Are they not now vpon the westerne shore,
Safe conducting the rebels from their ships,

Dar. No my good Lord my friends are in the North,

King. Cold friends to Richard, what do they in the North?
When they should serue their soueraigne in the West.

Dar. They haue not beene commanded mighty soueraigne,
Please it your Maiesty to giue me leaue,

Ile muster vp my friends and meete your grace,
Where and what time your maiesty shall please?

King. I, I, thou wouldst begone to ioyce with Richmond,
I will not trust you sir,

Dar. Most mighty soueraigne
You haue no cause to hold my friendшиp doubtfull,
I neuer was nor neuer will be false.

King. Well, go muster men; but heare you, leaue behind
Your son George Stanley, looke your faith be ferme:
Or else his heads assurance is but fraile.

Dar. So deale with him, as I proue true to you. Exit.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My gracious soueraigne, now in Devonshire,
As I by friends am well adverised,
Sir William Courtney, and the haughtie Prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his brother there,
With many more confederates are in arms,

Enter another Messenger.

Mes. My Leige in Kent the Gulfords are in arms,
And every houre more competitors
Flocke to their aide, and still there power increaseth.

Enter another Messenger.

Mes. My Lord the army of the Duke of Buckingham.
He strikes him.

of Richard the Third.

King, Out on ye Owles, nothing but songs of death,
Take that vntile you bring mee better newes.

Mes. Your gracie mistakes, the newes I bring is good,
My newes is, that by sudden flood and fall of waters,
The Duke of Buckingham army is dispersd and scattered:
And he himselfe fled no man knowes whither.

King. O I cry you mercy I did mistake,
Ratcliffe re waide him for the blow I gaue him;
Hath any well aduis'd friend giuen out,
Rewards for him that brings in Buckingham?

Mes. Such Proclamation hath beene made my Liege.

Enter another Messenger.

Mes. Sir Thomas Lovell, and Lord marques Dorset,
Tis said my Liege are vp in armes.
Yet this good comfort bring I to your gracie,
The Brittaine Nauie is dispersd, Richmond in Dorset shire,
Sent out a boat to aske them one the shire,
If they were his assistants, yea, or no:
Who answered him they came from Buckingham.
Upon his patie: he mistrusting them,
Hoist saile, and made away for Brittaine.

King. March on, march on since we are vp in armes,
Snot to fight with forraigne enemyes,
Let to beat downe these rebels here at home.

Enter Catesby.

Cat. My Liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken,
Thats the best newes, that the Eare of Richmond
Is with a mightie power landed at Mulford,
Is colder newes, yet they must be told.
King. Away towards Salisbury, while we reason here,
A royall battell might bee wonne and lost.
Some one take order Buckingham be brought
To Salisbury, the rest march on with me.

Enter Darby, Sir Christopher.

Dar. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me,
That in the stic of this most bloody bore,
My son George Stanley is franckt vp in hold,
If I revolt off goes yong Georges head,
The feare of that, with-holds my present aide,

But
